Treatment of Eczema

Eczema can, even when inherited, be controlled by attention to the general prin-ciples of health—cleanliness, exercise, propor diet, clothing and ventilation. Eczeme patients, old and young, should never use stimulants in any form. They should take daily baths and be most particular as to the regularity of all important bodily functions. Occardanal deportant barries. functions. Occasional doses of mild saline aperients, such as cream tartar, phosphate of soda or the old fashioned remedy of lac sulphur and cream tartar, mixed in equal quantities, with enough molasses to form a creamy paste and taken three times a day for ten days running, then omitted until again required, will be found of wonderful benefit. Let the patient drink freely of lemonade and avoid salt meats, pork in any form, and live upon a diet of fruits, red meats and antiscorbutic vege-

Many people are particularly susceptible to shellfish, and a case of eczema some-times follows the eating of lobster repeat-edly. Strawberries will also produce this effect frequently. Vigorous exercise will often, by inducing excessive perspiration, act as a curative for eczema, particularly when combined with the use of a harmless external application. Sulphur baths are efficacious for most skin diseases. If possible, it is well to take them in an estab-lished bathhouse, but they may be pre-pared at home as follows: To each 10 gal-lons of water add an ounce of sulphuret of potassium, or to each 15 gallons of water add an ounce of sulphuret of calcium. Where there is itching and the cruption seems virulent the sulphur bath is excel-lent as a preliminary treatment.—Cincin-nati Enquirer.

AUTUMN SONG.

A song of the reaping time,
Of the feast days of the year;
A song of the grain and the well filled wain,
And the husking time that's near.
Here's key, for a merry romp
In the brown old fields and vales!
And he, for the nead where the cattle feed!
And he, for the nead where the cattle feed!
And he, for the autumn gales!
A bunt through the tail, dim woods
For the fruit of the oak and vine,
A peop at the nest of the last redbreast
And a call where the catpmunks dine.
A smile in the morning skies,
And a laugh in the streams that flow
As they share their joy with the girl and boy
That today may a rambling go.

WHAT THE GRAND DUKE HEARD.

European Officers Disfused the Capture of American Cities.

The Grand Duke Alexis was at Kiel. He is a full Russian admiral now, and the head of the Russian navy. He was a frequent visitor to the Americans, and, like all the other notables, talked with the utmost frankness to our officers.

One day, watching the Columbia as she rode the waves as lightly and with the easy grace of a blue wing teal, the grand duke said to a captain: "I'm glad you Americans are rebuilding your fleet. Do you know what most impressed me when I visited your country? Let me tell you. The first thing was your won-derful national wealth; the second, the absolutely inadequate means at your disposal for national defense. You were like a drunken man with pockets full of money and two or three hungry ruffians on the dark side of the street waiting a chance to attack him."

"Why, do you mean to say"- began the somewhat startled captain, when the Russian put his hand on the other's arm and said: "Twice in my career I have heard the project of capturing one or two of your great cities and holding them for ransom deliberately discussed by officers of European fleets whose countries had hard work to make ends meet. And they meant it too. I once made a sensation when, after listening to a conversation of this kind, in which the officers of four different fleets took part, I said: 'Gentlemen, the United States and Russia are friends. Should she be unjustly attacked, Russia would help to see that the wrong was righted. Ah, I can't tell you where or who it was. Come over to the Kurik [the Russian flagship] and have a glass of wine."
—Washington Post.

Almost every renowned man of antiquity in the middle ages was believed to be attended by a spiritus familiaris. and not a few were suspected of being in direct league with the devil. Probably the oldest legend of which the Faust legend is a continuous thread is that of Simon Magus, mentioned in the history

According to Justin, he was a native of Gitton, a village in Samaria. He was, no doubt, a man of great intellectual powers. He was the father of the school of the Gnostics. It is also reported of him that he could make himself invisible, that he could pass through flames unharmed, could transpose matter, make gold and exorcise demons-in fact, he laid claim to all these powers and his name lived in the mouths of the people as a sort of Demiurg through many centuries until some other miracle working personality took his place at the popular fireside. Unusual accomplishments, great erudition, were attributed to the supernatural influence, and the general disposition to superstitions assumption was strengthened on the one hand by dogmatic affirmation on the part of the church of the existn personal satan, with his numerous household, and, on the other hand, by incorporating the magic arts among the practical sciences, of which astrology and alchemy occupied no mean part.—Menorah.

Man Overboard.

The presence of mind of a certain well known actor was always very re markable, but was never put to so severo a test as on the following occasion: While acting the part of a pirate chief he was being conveyed in a vessel across the stage with his band of brigands on deck beside him.

One of the supers, whose duty it was to work the waves under large sheets of gauze, was so unfortunate as to put his head through the gauze and to appear standing in the middle of the mimic sea before the full view of the audience.

The actor on the vessel, without losing his presence of mind, called out, "A man overboard!" and the astonished super was houled upon dock by the pirates amid the applause of the spectators, who imagined it was a part of the play. -London Spectator.

Inoculation For Yellow Fever.

At the meeting of the American Publie Health association at Denver, Dr. Manuel Garmona y Valle of Mexico read a description of his discovery of a certain cure for yellow fever, which he has used successfully in hundreds of cases. His method is to make a subcutaneous injection in the cellular tissue of the arm of a secretion taken from a yellow fever patient between the fourth and fourteenth days of the fever. This effects a cure, but the disease can be guarded against in this way, just as smallpox is guarded against by vaccination. - Baltimore Sun.

Poverty is very terrible, and some times kills the very soul within us, but it is the north wind that lashes men into vikings; it is the soft, luscious south wind which lulls them to lotus dreams. - Ouida.

There is a false modesty, which is vanity; a false glory, which is levity; a false grandeur, which is meanness; a false virtue, which is hypocrisy, and a false wisdom, which is prudery.-Bru-

AN HONEST TRAMP.

And Afterward He Regretted That It Was So Unremunerative.

"Madam," he began as the door was opened in response to his ring, "I have no tale of woe to tell you—no story to excite your profound sympathies."

"I'm heartily glad of that," replied the little woman with her foot against the door. "No, madam-my wife did not commit suicide, and neither am I asking aid for five motherless children." "How nice!"

"I could tell you," he went on, "that I haven't had a mouthful to eat for two days, but that would be an untruth. I had a fill up only last night.' "That's lucky for you," replied the woman, "for you can't get even a bone

"I did not call to ask for either food or clothing, ma'am. I called here as an honest man. About a year ago you had the kindness to give me an old pair of trousers. I asked heaven to bless you and went my way. When I came to don the garment, I discovered this nickel in one of the pockets. The tempter whispered to me to keep it. I tried to argue with myself that you were rich and would never miss it, but my conscience could not be quieted."

"You've been struggling with your conscience a long time," observed the woman as she opened the door a little wider.

"Not that, ma'am, but I've been away in the far west and just returned yesterday. I am here to restore your nickel. Misfortune may have made me a tramp, but poverty has not made me dishonest. Here it is—the selfsame coin. I have carried it thousands of miles—been hungry when it would have brought me food—but I have safely brought it back to you. Take it, ma'am, and remember''—

"Hand it over!" she interrupted as she held out her hand. "With pleasure, ma'am, and now, if you could spare me''-'But I can't!" "Couldn't spare me an old coat or vest?"

"No, sir!"

"Nor a pair of socks?"

"No, sir!" "Madam, I seek to be upright and"-

"Can't help that," she cut in. "I'm pretty sure you found a quarter instead of a nickel and that you owe me 20 cents, but we'll let it go this time. Now, then, skip."

The man stood and looked at the door

a long time after it was closed on him, and it was three minutes before he reached the sidewalk. Then a pedestrian who had taken notice of his perturbed countenance halted to ask:

"Well, old man, did you get the throw down at the kitchen door?"
"Say," returned the tourist, "I've got to hit some other line or starve to death! As a put up jobbist trampist I'm a dead failure!"-Detroit Free Wasted Sympathy.

A well meaning old gentleman, whose interest in other people's affairs often results in his discomfiture, struck a new snag on Saturday. As he was taking his afternoon stroll on Chestnut street, in West Philadelphia, he encoun-tered a party of people who were evidently moving their household effects to some new abode. It consisted of a stout lady of Celtic origin and three small children, all of whom were heavily laden with various household ntensils. The youngest child carried what appeared to be a birdcage, wrapped in a red tablecloth, which he swung to and fro and banged against every trolley pole he passed in such a manner as to arouse the indignation of the gentleman, who said to the leader of the expe-

"Madam, if you permit that youngster to ill use your canary in that way' "Phat canary is thot?" asked the daughter of Erin.

"In the cage there," said the old gentleman. "Or is it a mocking bird? No matter, it"-

"Go 'long, you ould fool, and don't give none of your spare chin to a decent lady till you kin tell the difference between a birdcage and a mousetrap." Then the caravan moved along and left the benevolent old party deep in reflection .- Philadelphia Record.

"The World Do Move." The last of the brilliant series of articles in Le Revue des Deux Mondes by Auguste Filon is devoted to a searching analysis of the styles and completed workmanship of Sydney Grundy, Henry Arthur Jones and Arthur Pinero. Wonders will never cease! A dozen years ago France did not believe that England had a drama. Today its authat England and a drama. Today its authors, plays and critics are seriously discussed in one of the most brilliant of French literary magazines and by an author of rare intelligence. A dozen years ago, too, England did not believe America had a drama. Now, however, she is keenly alive to the fact.

WINTER WRAPS.

The Mealbag Cloak Again Revived, but

Not a Favorite. The old fashioned sack, which is again revived, does not meet with a great deal of success and is adopted by only a few women who have a passion for the few women who have a passion for the latest novelty, however ugly and unbecoming it may be. These sacks are without form, if not void, hanging straight and seamless from the shoulders, and are without the watteau plait that they had at their last revival, a few years age, and which added to their bedgewn appearance. The medieval collar again shows itself on out of door garments. It is of various forms—round, square and rippled—but is always high and flaring, framing the face and sheltering the neck. A collar of this sort is only suitable for nice wraps, as it is incongruous with informal costume or in incongruous with informal costume or in cheap materials.

Besides the regulation jackets and collars there are numerous classified and unclassi-fled outer garments to be seen now. Long wraps, both close and loose, of rich materials, embroidered, trimmed with jet or passementerie and finished with fur or feathers, are worn by women who can afford them and are fond of these rather cumbersons garments. Louis Seet seets cumbersome garments. Louis Seize coats of velvet and Marie Antoinette fichus of fur, crossed on the heart and fastened be are other variations in the outer wardrobe which are noticeable and picturesque. Evening wraps are sumptuous to the last extreme, all the richest kinds of brocades, velvets, furs and trimmings being employed for them.

The illustration shows an evening cape of turquoise satin. It falls in godets and is lined with gold colored taffets. A deep embroidering of gold is carried around the edge, and a yoke shaped design in the same sort of embroidery covers the shoul-ders. The high, flaring collar is bordered with turquoise ostrich feathers. This cap is worn over a gown of white silk, having a striped pattern of pink roses and green leaves. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Latitude of the Present Style-Accessories to Evening Toilets.

The medici collar, now so fashionable, is usually of black satin and is bordered with ostrich tips. It is most becoming and stately, but should be avoided by women who have short necks.

There are an immense variety of fichus, guipures, chemisettes and similar accessories destined to accompany and give variety to evening toilets. There is much latitude allowed to individual choice, and, provided the large sleeves and skirt are duly respected, one can dress al-most as one pleases and be certain of being in vogue. All styles of wraps and jackets are worn, from the short, straight sack to the long, rich mantle, including the whole gamut between.

Women of moderate circumstances will do well to have two out of door garments—a jacket for general service and a cape, more elaborate in style, for nice occasions when a tailor jacket would not be in keep-ing with the formal gown and would crush its sleeves and trimming. If she goes out a great deal, an evening cape must be added to the list, but it need not be very expensive if the color and trimmings are

The sleeves, made in a single piece, bave astrakhan cuffs. The hat is of otter alt, trimmed with satin to match.
